Environmental Enforcement Under Trump: 5 Open Questions

Environmental enforcement priorities at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Justice are likely to shift when President-elect Donald Trump takes office, although it's too early to know exactly how. Here are five questions experts are asking.

Greenlighting Kids' Climate Suit, Ore. Judge Cites Ancient Law

An Oregon federal judge on Thursday refused to throw out a suit accusing the federal government of failing to protect future generations from the threats of climate change, saying the government's focus on specific laws was a myopic view of a suit over fundamental rights protected by more ancient law.

Flint Ordered To Deliver Bottled Water To Residents

A Michigan federal judge on Thursday ordered the city of Flint to deliver bottled water to residents dealing with lead-tainted drinking water and its effects, saying problems with the current water distribution program warranted court intervention.

Obama Administration's Dakota Pipeline Decision Days Away

The Obama administration is close to revealing whether it will allow Dakota Access LLC to drill beneath North Dakota's Lake Oahe for a $3.8 billion pipeline, a U.S. Department of Justice lawyer said Thursday in a high-profile lawsuit from tribal groups seeking to stop the project.

3rd Circ. Grapples With Dose Evidence In Pa. Radiation Suits

A Third Circuit panel on Thursday wrestled with whether a group of Pittsburgh-area residents suing several Babcock & Wilcox Inc. units over injuries stemming from contamination at a nearby nuclear materials processing facility should be required to present dosage and exposure evidence in order to bring their cases to trial.

Trump Presidency Won't Be A Red Light For Green Energy

LAW
FIRM

President-elect Donald J. Trump has thrown his weight behind fossil fuels and vowed to nix major climate change regulations, but experts say that won't derail U.S. green energy growth, and that states — not the federal government — will continue to take the lead in stimulating development of wind, solar and other clean energy sources.

Next Pa. AG's Enviro Goals Depend On Good Ties With DEP

Josh Shapiro, who was elected Pennsylvania's next attorney general Tuesday, pledged during his campaign to crack down on polluters, but to succeed, experts say he will have to bolster his office's rapport with the state's Department of Environmental Protection and persuade the agency that prosecutors can move cases quickly.

EPA Must Outline Financial Requirements For Mining Cos.

Under a D.C. Circuit court order, the U.S. Environment Protection Agency must propose new financial assurance requirements for the hard-rock mining industry — and identify industries next up for regulation — by Dec. 1, 2016. There are a number of key issues that industry should consider when reviewing the EPA's forthcoming proposal, say attorneys from King & Spalding LLP.

Merging Law Firms: Why Hogan Lovells Has Worked

As shown by the impending merger between Arnold & Porter LLP and Kaye Scholer LLP, consolidation in the legal industry remains a popular strategy among firms looking to boost revenue and acquire new clients. J. Warren Gorrell Jr., a key architect of the 2010 merger that created Hogan Lovells, reflects on his own experience and why mergers of equals are particularly difficult.

OPINION: The Verdict — A Rejection Of Politics As Usual

The verdict on Nov. 8, was not unanimous, especially when Secretary Hillary Clinton will end up with a popular vote advantage. Yet, it is a message of extreme magnitude from voters willing to overlook the serious flaws of a candidate because they could not reconcile themselves to ratifying the perpetuation of politics as usual, says Reuben Guttman, a partner of Guttman Buschner & Brooks PLLC and adjunct professor at Emory Law School.

BigLaw Staff Turns To Blue Chip Senate Candidates In 2016

Federal records show employees of the 10 largest U.S. law firms donated overwhelmingly to Senate candidates who were ahead in pre-election polls this year, a strategy that paid off in all but a few instances Tuesday.

Hope Flickers For Handful Of GOP-Backed Obama Court Picks

With real estate mogul Donald Trump headed to the White House, Republicans now have little reason to move on any Obama administration pick for a federal bench, but court watchers said a handful of pending nominees still have a shot at confirmation if they can keep the support of Republican senators concerned about vacancies in their home states.

Fear Of 'The Cloud' Hampers Atty Success, Panel Says

Technology is making it cheaper to operate and even launch a new law firm, but succeeding means fully and responsibly embracing "the cloud" as central to your practice, according to a Thursday panel discussion at the New York City Bar Association.

Law360's Weekly Verdict: Legal Lions & Lambs

The Federal Circuit rejected a $2 million sanctions request by Toshiba America Inc. against Niro Law Ltd., wrapping up a long-running patent dispute and landing the law firm among this week's legal lions. Not so fortunate were legal lambs Reed Smith LLP and Farrell White & Legg PLLC, whose client American Medical Systems Inc. drew sanctions for issuing a faulty subpoena in violation of a protective order.

Here's what brand owners are doing to cope and what they hope will change.

In Case You Missed It: Hottest Firms And Stories On Law360

For those who missed out, here's a look back at the law firms, stories and expert analyses that generated the most buzz on Law360 last week.

Rainmaker Q&A: Goodwin Procter's Ilan S. Nissan

I prefer to view my business development style as an ability to connect people to people and people to solutions. I find that many law firms have the skills to solve client problems, but few are able to deliver advice in a way that a client can best utilize it, says Ilan Nissan, a senior partner in Goodwin Procter LLP.

Rainmaker Q&A: Norton Rose's Joseph Graham Jr.

If you are not constantly focused on your client's needs, you can bet someone else from a different firm will be. But if you really get to know your client and their position in the ever-changing legal landscape, their successes become your successes, says Joseph Graham Jr., Norton Rose Fulbright US LLP.
